Student Senate At Roosevelt U. Cuts NSA Ties

The student senate of Roosevelt University voted by acclamation Wednesday to withdraw from the controversial National Student Assn.

In other action, by a 9-to-4 vote, the senate decided to appoint a committee to study the possibility of forming a union of students at the university, which has an enrollment of 6,700.

The resolution to disassociate from NSA—which earlier this year was found to be secretly receiving money from the Central Intelligence Agency—was made by the organization's representative on the campus, Mark Dean of Lincolnwood.

Dean said Roosevelt University is not benefiting from its membership in the association, which traditionally has represented the radical viewpoint among U.S. college students.

At the same time, Dean said, the university is spending $600 a year in NSA dues and related activities. This money could be put to better use, he said.

In a referendum last May at the University of Chicago, a proposal to sever that school's ties with the NSA failed, 1,000 to 688.
